Michigan is known for many things: the Great Lakes, the Motor City, and its passionate love for sports. However, one thing that often gets overlooked in the state's reputation is its notorious road conditions. For drivers in Michigan, potholes are a regular and sometimes terrifying reality. While these road hazards are an everyday inconvenience, they can also lead to more severe consequences, such as blown-out tires, costly repairs, and potential safety issues. That's why it's essential for drivers in Michigan to consider purchasing Tire & Wheel coverage, whether through car dealerships or through insurance providers like Insurish.

Why are Michigan's Roads So Bad?

Michigan's winters are harsh. Freezing and thawing cycles cause the ground beneath the roads to shift, which results in cracks, dips, and eventually, the dreaded potholes. Combine that with the wear and tear of frequent traffic, and you have a recipe for disaster. According to the Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT), there are over 2,000 miles of roads in the state that are in poor condition, and this number seems to grow every year.

The Real Cost of Potholes and Poor Road Conditions

While we all know the sight of a pothole when driving, it's easy to overlook just how costly these hazards can be. Hitting a pothole may cause immediate tire damage, leading to a blowout or severe flat. But it's not just tires that are at risk. Poor road conditions can also lead to suspension damage, misalignment, and even bent rims. These repairs can be expensive, and what starts as a seemingly small issue can quickly escalate.

According to the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety, pothole-related damage costs U.S. drivers billions of dollars each year. In Michigan, this is no different. Drivers regularly pay hundreds of dollars in out-of-pocket expenses for tire replacements and repair costs, which could have been avoided with the right coverage.

How Tire & Wheel Coverage Can Protect You

Tire & Wheel coverage is a type of protection that covers the costs of repairs or replacements for damage caused by potholes, road debris, and other road hazards. This coverage is often available through car dealerships as part of a vehicle purchase or can be included as an option in your auto insurance policy. By having this type of coverage, you can avoid the financial strain that comes with the unexpected cost of replacing a blown-out tire or repairing a damaged rim.

For drivers in Michigan, where the risk of hitting a pothole is nearly constant, Tire & Wheel coverage is a smart investment. Whether you're buying a new or used car from a dealership or purchasing coverage through an insurance provider like Insurish, this added layer of protection ensures that you won't be left with a hefty repair bill when you least expect it.
